Absentee voting begins Oct. 3

Absentee voting by machine will begin Oct. 3, in Gallatin County Clerk Tracy Miles’ office. Unlike many other states, Kentucky doesn’t allow “Early Voting” but anyone who will be out of the county on Election Day, Nov. 6, may vote after Oct. 3, in the Clerk’s office. Anyone unable to get to the Clerk’s office can apply for a paper absentee ballot. Those applications must be received by Oct. 30.

Voters will find several local races on the ballot this year. These include:

Warsaw City Council

Running for one of the six seats on Warsaw City Council will be incumbents Tyler Boaz, Nelson Brown, Randy Jones, Keith Jones, Jamie Gould and Jerry Hunt. Former council member Gary Thompson is also in the race as is Michael Finck.

Glencoe City Council

The race for Glencoe City Council is crowded with ten candidates vying for the six seats. They include incumbents Charlotte Adams, Leesa Nantz, Richard Dunaway, Mike Hampton, and JuJu Sullivan. Also hoping to join council are former mayor Mike Murphy, former council member, James Edmondson as well as Benny Edmondson Anthony West and Teresa McPherson.

Sparta Commission

Dale Samuel, Bonnie Bond, Bill Dunavent and Chad Dunavent have filed to run for the Sparta City Commission.

School Board

There are three School Board seats up for election. Incumbent Becky Burgett has filed to run for another term in the Napoleon/Concord district and is challenged by Chad Murray. Sparta incumbent Joanie Rogers is challenged by Joseph “Dickie” Wilson. Glencoe incumbent Alex Tainsh is running unopposed.

Soil and Conservation Incumbents Joe Smith, Ron Courtney, Peggy Tinch and Joe Lowe have filed to keep their seats as county soil and water conservation officers.

Other Races

Also on the ballot will be the election of the President of the United States between incumbent Democrat Barack Obama and Republican challenger Mitt Romney.

There is also a race for the U. S. Congress in this District between Re-

Little change with school enrollment

The recent enrollment spikes that have increased the student population at Gallatin County Schools in recent years may be flattening out.

Superintendent of Schools Dorothy Perkins reports preliminary figures show there are only two more students enrolled in the school system this year than last. There are a total of 1,628 students enrolled in kindergarten through 12th grade. There are 1,700 students in the school system if you include the preschool and Head Start programs.

The high school has gained 24 students while the lower elementary is down 14 students, the upper elementary is down 9 students and the middle school has gained one student.

New company expected to add local jobs

News comes at Job Fair

With more than 100 job seekers attending and 10 businesses taking applications, the county’s first “Job Fair” last Thursday was judged a big success by Judge/executive Ken McFarland.

The highlight of the afternoon came when Tim Odom, C.E.O. of Odom Industries, announced he hoped to soon open a factory in the county. Odom and his wife have a home in Gallatin County but his corporate headquarters are in Milford, Ohio. His company, which has been in business for over 100 years, designs and fabricates heavy metal parts for a variety of industries.

Odom didn’t say how many people his Gallatin County plant would employ or give specifics about his plans for a facility in the county.

After the meeting, McFarland said he would work with Odom to make sure he saw everything the county had to offer. He also said there had been no promises of financial incentives that some companies have received to locate or expand operations here.

The Job Fair was a joint effort between Gallatin County and the Northern Kentucky Area Development District (NKADD) to help those in need of employment find it.

Doug Beard from NKADD told job seekers how to make a good impression in interviews. He also offered tips on filling out resumes and applications. He said job seekers should be careful about sharing information that could damage their reputation on social media websites such as Facebook.

“One of the first places human resources people look these days is Facebook,” Beard said. “If you want to get hired, make sure there’s nothing on your page or any of your friends’ pages that could hurt you.”

Larry and Judy Oliver from the Gallatin County Public Library explained the library had many resources to help people find employment. They offered to set up appointments with anyone who needed help with applications or who wanted advice for the interview process. They also said the library provides computers and computer training for those who need to fill out on-line applications.

Among the area businesses that sent representatives to the Job Fair were: Gallatin Steel, Steel Technologies, Dorman Products, Gallatin County Schools, Beringer Drug Center, Gallatin County

These babies taught me some lessons

This and That

By Kelley Warnick
Editor

When I awoke Friday morning, I didn’t know much about babies. Although people tell me I used to be one, it’s hard to imagine I ever spent my days sleeping, spitting up on myself and wearing diapers.

By the time I went to bed that night, however, I knew much more about newborns. That’s because I was asked to bring my camera and record the first hours of a very special pair of twins, Koree and Nicholas Thompson. Their mom, Kaycee Thompson, is a well-known and popular science teacher at Gallatin County High School and their father is a valued employee at North American Stainless.

The first thing I learned is that babies, especially right before they’re born, make people nervous. Very nervous. Grandmother paced the hospital halls, dad dressed up like an astronaut so he could enter the delivery room, and doctors cracked jokes in a vain attempt to bring calm to the situation.

That all changed once the baby, or in this case babies, were on the way. All became quiet as relatives and friends waited for news. It reminded me of the time my father and I sat nervously around the television in July, 1969, hoping to see Neil Armstrong’s space capsule land safely on the moon.

The mood changed, however, when word arrived that all was well with mom and her newborns. People cheered, hugged, kissed and acted like the ball dropped on Times Square at New Year’s Eve.

Not long after the twins took their first breaths, they were dressed to meet the world: Koree in her special pink pajamas and matching hat and Nicholas similarly attired in blue. That’s when I learned something else about babies.

They make adult women forget the English language.

“Oh, Oh, Oh, Oh the wittle bittie babies are soooooo cute,” one relative cooed in a high-pitched voice. “I just wanna luv on ‘em!”

Next, I learned people love to hold babies. There weren’t enough babies to go around that afternoon. Nicholas and Koree were more welcome in the laps in that hospital room than blankets are in laps at freezing December football games.

As I look back, I’m amazed at all I learned. I found out babies have personalities even when they’re just a few hours old: Koree seemed happy while Nicholas was thoughtful. I also learned like many adults, babies get testy when they’re hungry, smile when they’re happy and close their eyes and sleep when there’s nothing much else to do.

It was clear, the twins have wonderful parents who will provide everything they’ll need to grow up healthy, intelligent and strong.

When I left the hospital, I realized one other thing: I have a lot more to learn and I’m looking forward to Koree and Nicholas teaching it to me.

Double the pleasure

Austin Dillon celebrated in Victory Lane on Saturday afternoon after winning the Kentucky 300 Nationwide race at the Kentucky Speedway. The Nationwide rookie also won the June race at the Speedway.

Friday night, James Buescher won the crash-filled Truck Race. He also won the June race at the Speedway.

Dr. Furnish is praised

Editor's Note: The following responds to last week's editorial about the "Muslim World", written by Dr. Tim Furnish.

Dear Editor:

Thank God for people like Dr. Furnish. The truth of Islam is finally starting to come out. This is the only religion that has murderous violence as an inherent part of its belief.

You can be Muslim and be a good American but you can't be a true believer of the literal word of the Koran and be a good American. You cannot practice both Sharia and constitutional law.

That means good American Muslims are afraid to speak out, fearing deadly retribution.

No other religion uses violence to keep its people in line. Who kills people over a cartoon? The only answer to insanity is to not allow it. Apologies and acquiescence only encourage more violence, as is being seen now.

We have an administration that is either naive and believes submission, instead of strength, will keep us safe; or, even scarier, these officials know the truth but don't care. Either way, they are dangerous to our security and way of life.

Most Americans have no clue about the insidious spread of radical Islamic belief in our communities, schools and prisons. Groups like CAIR, with proven connections to terrorist groups, are accepted as legitimate representatives of the Muslim community.

Our president insists the Muslim Brotherhood is harmless when its true intentions are clear for all to see. This groups has been dangerous since its inception in the 1920s. Today, it uses modern tools to push its agenda. And it's working.

I believe the previous administration made mistakes when dealing with groups like this through ignorance of their real agenda. But we now have a president who brags about his understanding of Islam and groups like the Brotherhood.

If this is true, we must vote him out before it's too late. There are named Muslims with connections to radical groups in the White House, the State Department and, even worse, in the Homeland Security Department.

Most of the mainstream media is ignoring this to protect the president and get him re-elected.

Study the issues, research the people involved and vote accordingly.

Most teens are polite

Dear Editor:

There are always people who talk about the bad things young people do, but I want to talk about the majority of young people.

I work in a grocery store in Warsaw and just about every young person who comes in is very polite.

They say "thank you", "yes ma'am", "yes sir", and tell you to have a nice day.

That is so nice and I commend them for that.

Kentucky Commentary

'Fairness' can be hazardous to health and wealth

By Jim Waters

"Fairness" is a term thrown around this campaign season more than a football at a Cards vs. Cats game.

President Obama has even made it the centerpiece of his reelection effort, using rhetoric filled "fairness" but precious little "freedom."

One of his standard lines calls for "an economy where everyone gets a fair shot" and "everyone does their fair share."

My question: what makes a government edict fair or unfair?

Is it "fair" to Kentucky citizens for Gov. Steve Beshear to accept $67 million from Washington to set up a government-run health exchange without legislators' consent?

Is it "fair" to Americans for Obamacare to be marketed as the "Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act" when it will not protect the most vulnerable among us, and makes health care for responsible Americans less affordable?

Is it "fair" to force everyone in Kentucky to buy health insurance at a price that cannot be influenced by either existing health or personal lifestyle choices?

To some, this may seem intuitively fair — especially to those chronically ill patients unable to pay for their own care.

But for Obamacare proponents, such "fairness" should be decided willy-nilly on a case-by-case basis.

They claim it's "fair" to implement policies that are "unfair" to healthy Americans who neither need nor want such high-cost coverage. Instead, this coverage is forced upon them to subsidize those who, in many cases, have made irresponsible decisions that have resulted in their current predicament.

Is it "fair" that healthy behavior is punished for the sake of making unhealthy choices less costly to the individual?

Don't we want just the opposite?

When it comes to pollution, many environmentalists point to Kentucky's coal industry as one of the culprits infringing on social equity. They hail the Environmental Protection Agency as a bastion of fairness to keep the commonwealth's ecosystems and public lands from being polluted.

But what's "fair" for the radical greenies may be completely "unfair" for the Appalachian communities throughout Kentucky that rely on the black rock for economic well-being.

Consider the jobs drawn to Kentucky by the aluminum, steel and automotive industries because of low energy rates due to Kentucky coal.

How is it "fair" for the costs and benefits of Kentucky coal to be determined by unelected bureaucrats in far-off Washington D.C. when the effects of our energy sector are felt right here at home?

Who gets to determine what's "fair" when it comes to tax policies?

Apparently, one percent of Americans holding 40 percent of the national wealth is "unfair," but expropriating this group's legally acquired property for the sake of equity isn't. Just how did the Occupy Protestors calibrate their moral compass to arrive at that gonzo conclusion? Am I the only one lost here?

There's an assumption that if we raise taxes on the "wealthy," the only consequence will be more money flowing into government coffers.

But such "fair" policies reduce economic activity, which, in turn, reduce the amount of money available for government coffers.

Some want to raise taxes anyway, claiming they ensure "equity."

That seems "unfair" to me. And why shouldn't my understanding of "fairness" count just as much as anyone else's?

Crossbow kills woman in Owen

A Floyd County woman died Sunday, Sept. 23, after apparently being accidentally shot by a crossbow.

Yvette Reffitt, 59 years old, of Martin, KY, was hunting on a farm in Owen County when the shooting occurred. She had been dropped off to hunt by herself at 6:45 a.m. When Reffitt did not return for lunch, members of her hunting group began looking for her and found her lifeless body at approximately 11:30 a.m.

The preliminary investigation shows Reffitt died as a result of a crossbow shot, along with pre-existing medical conditions.

Detective Kurt Buhts is leading the investigation. Detective Buhts was assisted at the scene by the Owen County Sheriff's Department, Owen County EMS, Owen County Rescue, and the Monterey Fire Department.

Job Fair

"I was impressed with the people who came seeking employment and with the number of companies on hand," said McFarland. "It was also encouraging to see the number of people who stayed around after the meeting was over to talk to company representatives."

Judge McFarland said the Gallatin County Job Fair was the first its kind in Northern Kentucky and may be used as a template for other communities in the state that are trying to find their residents new or better employment opportunities.

The most recent figures from the Kentucky

Office of Employment show Gallatin County has an 8.8 percent unemployment rate. The eight county Northern Kentucky unemployment rate is 7.6 percent and the state's rate is 8.5 percent.

Here's what some of our friends have been doing lately, and we have the continuing odyssey of the Meyungs and the Bradleys on their Alaskan Adventure:

•On Thursday, the cruise ship docked in Ketchikan, the salmon capitol of the world. The Bradleys and Meyungs boarded a small tour boat for the Ketchikan by Land and Sea Tours. They saw about 15 miles of shoreline, Whiskey Creek, where bootleggers of yesteryear hung out, and a retired salmon canning factory. On the way back to the cruise ship, their tour stopped at Saxmon Park, a totem pole park. Totem poles are carved to tell a family story.

Friday, the cruise ship arrived at Vancouver Island, British Columbia, and the city of Victoria. The Bradleys had chosen a bus tour of the city, and thought the city was beautiful, with flowers everywhere. The tour took them to the highest point in the city for a grand view of the town and island. The Meyungs had chosen a horse and carriage tour and they really enjoyed seeing the downtown on the slower pace. More on this adventure next week.

•Alice Johnson spent most of Saturday with her grandchildren. She picked up Dominic and Brooke Alexander and Hannah Mitchell and took them all to the Florence Mall. They had lunch at Taco Bell and then went to the Halloween Express Store where they picked out their costumes for the big night coming up on October 31. On the way home, she picked up her very young grandsons, Colt and Corbin Johnson. Later in the day she enjoyed a visit by Avah and Rebekah Mitchell and Ethan Alexander, and Ethan spent the night. On Sunday afternoon, Ron and Alice took Marcie McCune to the Belterra buffet for her birthday. They were accompanied by family members Greg and Angela Mitchell, with their children Avah, Hannah, and Rebekah; and Ethan Alexander. HAPPY BIRTHDAY, MARCIE!

•Rae McEntyre continued her exploration of Kentucky State Historic Sites with a visit to the Isaac Shelby State Historic Site in Junction City. Isaac Shelby was Kentucky's first and fifth governor, and this site, the family burial ground, is all that is left of his plantation, "Traveler's Rest". Rae then traveled to Buckhorn State Resort Park in Perry County, where she participated in an elk tour. She went to an elk viewing site in Knott County and heard the bull elk bugling. The group saw a small herd of 17 elk in the early morning hours, and later saw a group of five bull elk.

•The Monthly Book Club met last Wednesday at the library to discuss a book called Harry Truman's Excellent Adventure, by author Matthew Algeo. Attending the discussion were Judy Noel, Marie Allison, Betty Wright, Mary Jo Mylor, Bonnie McKee, Lonni Faller, Janet McGaha, Helen Walker, Jackie Neal, and John Bennet. The group all agreed they quite enjoyed the book and highly recommend it as a really good read. The next book assignment is "Lucy's Story", authored by Larry Hamilton and written by Christina DeLaet. The group meets once a month and new members are always welcome to join these lively discussions.

•Rick & Bev Andrew attended the wedding reception for Beth Ann & Matt McKinney on Sunday afternoon.

•Recent visitors at the home of Carol Estes were Teresa and Harry Suter of Ponce Inlet, Florida and Frankfort. Teresa and Carol worked together for Kentucky State Government in the 1970's in Covington, and in the 1980's and 90's in Frankfort. Once again, Carol took her guests to Jewel's on Main, and once again, everyone loved eating there! Carol also visited her Mother in Ashland this past week.

•Candy Young and her daughters, Emma and Lydia surprised Steve and Skeeter Braaten, Saturday, with a visit to their home in Indianapolis. Emma and Lydia helped Grandpap finish a landscaping project before going shopping with Grams and Candy. Saturday evening, they watched a movie and then Grandpap made a fire outside so they could roast some marshmallows. Grams and the girls went to church, Sunday morning, after a big breakfast at the house. The Youngs returned to Warsaw after visiting for a little while after church.

•Friday night, Shirley Chipman and Mae Wallace enjoyed supper at the Yum Yum restaurant. Shirley's Saturday guests were Mae Wallace, Derina, Savannah, and Autaum Doolin. Sunday dinner guests were Derina, Autaum and Savannah Doolin; Jama and Lanette Morrison; Ruthie Niebergall; Jessica and Kendalyn Schrage.

•Mary Jane Day reports she has had a busy week with a lot of meetings, but found the time Saturday morning to participate in the Pancreatic Cancer 5K Walk, Purple Strides, with her sister, Betty Jean Valentino, at Lunken Airport in Cincinnati. She said there were close to 1,000 participants hoping to raise money for awareness and research.

•Delores Hopperton spent last Monday taking care of three of her grandchildren, triplets, while their parents were at the hospital getting baby sister, Molly Caroline. The rest of Delores's week was taken up visiting with the new little one and the triplets. Delores said it was a great week, and her family is truly blessed.

•Shirley Ann Howell and her niece, Lavon Powell of Corinth, spent Saturday in Liberty attending the largest Apple Pie Festival in the area. Sunday afternoon, Shirley Ann enjoyed visiting with her cousin, Patsy Marksberry and family, in Rising Sun, Indiana, before Patsy leaves on Thursday for her winter home in Foley, Alabama.

LIFE WITH ANNIE: Annie's favorite time of day is bedtime, probably because she knows that once we are in bed she is assured that I'm not leaving her alone anytime self across my head, peering into my face to see if my eyes are open – as though a person could sleep with a puppy lying on her head! She is very smart, knows the meaning of lots of words, and seems new every day. What joy she brings to me!

Ask Doctor Dirt...

By David Hull

PUMPKIN CHUCKER CHALLENGE

Well folks, the annual Gallatin County Pumpkin Festival is only a couple weeks away and I'm busy readying my 2012 pumpkin launcher. If you get busy, you still have time to build one yourself and haul it down to Warsaw Riverfront Park on October 6th. I'd sure love to have some competition this year. And by the way, my launcher this year is radically different from years past; and it's about a zillion times more likely to go terribly wrong. You really don't want to miss this.

See you at the park on October 6th.

Dr. Dirt

Dear Doctor Dirt,

With the dry summer, I didn't get a chance to get a lot of the things done in my yard that I'd hoped to. I have some grass seeding to do and some shrubs and trees I'd like to plant. Is now an okay time to do these things? Thanks.

C.W.
Warsaw

Dear C.W.,

Boy, are you right about being behind on yard chores! I'm pretty behind myself. Now would be a great time to sow seed and plant trees and shrubs. Actually, fall is my favorite time to plant just about anything in the yard.

The reason I like fall for planting is because, in the fall, we seem to have a more constant supply of soil moisture; this means less watering. I LIKE less watering. And even though the air temperatures are lower, the soil temperatures remain high enough for root growth.

Please don't think I'm saying you won't have to water at all; especially if we're talking about grass seeding. No matter what time of year it is, we still have to keep seeded areas moist or we just won't get the results we want. Happy planting.

Doctor Dirt is really David Hull, Gallatin County Extension Agent for Agriculture. If you have farm or garden questions for the good doctor, stop by or call the Extension Office at 567-5481. Or, you can email him at dhull@uky.edu.

Open Every Day 6 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The Kentucky Department of Parks announced today a new name for Big Bone Lick State Park. The new name will be Big Bone Lick State Historic Site.

Parks Commissioner Elaine Walker said the name change came about to recognize the historical importance of the park in Boone County.

"Big Bone Lick is known as the birthplace of American vertebrate paleontology and scientists regularly visit here and make use of the historic items found here," Walker said. "Meriwether Lewis, William Clark and Thomas Jefferson had roles in the history of this area and items from this site have been studied and distributed around the world."

Big Bone Lick has its origins steeped in prehistoric events.

Ancient creatures like the mammoth, mastodon, ground sloth and bison once roamed through mineral springs and swamps now grassy plains covered with trees and shrubs. The remains of those animals have been the subject of numerous studies, books and research projects.

The park was also designated by the Department of the Interior as a National Natural Landmark in 2009. The park was also designated by the Department of the Interior as a National Register Archaeological District.

Big Bone Lick State Historic Site's indoor-outdoor museum has collections of bones from ancient creatures once attracted to the mineral springs of the area. On the grounds are life-size replicas of mastodons and bison, and a live bison herd.

The park also has picnic areas, sports fields and a 62-site campground with electricity, grills, water, restrooms, showers, a pool and small grocery. For more information about Big Bone Lick State Historic Site, call 859-384-3522 or visit www.parks.ky.gov
